Dramatised visits are currently cancelled.

This 19th century palace, located in Plaza de Cibeles, is the headquarters of Casa de América. Its construction began in 1877 as a residence for the Marquis and Marquise of Linares, who lived in the palace from 1884, although the interior decoration was not fully completed until 1900.

The building was the work of Carlos Colubí, Adolf Ombrecht and Manuel Aníbal Álvarez. It is made up of four floors (basement, mezzanine, main floor and third floor) plus a lower basement. The decoration is inspired by diverse styles, ranging from the luxurious Louis 15th and Louis 16th to the pompous Rococo or the sober Luis Felipe. All of the rooms are decorated with exquisite taste: tapestries from the Gobelinos Factory, ceilings decorated with plenty of gold and mythological paintings, exotic wood floors, French lamps, carpets from the Royal Tapestry Factory, silk from China for the oriental hall, diverse panneaux decorated with rich embroidered fabric. Its façade combines decorative elements in a French and Italian style.

The quality of its marble or mural paintings, as well as the wealth of its fabrics and carpets, bronzes, lamps, mosaics and woodwork, represents one of the best conserved 19th century architectural sites in Spain.
