

Welcome to Madrid

Located in the north-west of Madrid, this building built between 1949 and 1954 on the same site as the former Royal Site of La Moncloa, destroyed during the Civil War, is the headquarters of the Presidency of the Spanish Government, as well as the official residence of the President of the Spanish Government and his family, which was established in 1977 by President Adolfo Suárez.

The palace was built by the architect, Diego Méndez, following the model of the Casa del Labrador in Aranjuez, and it originally served as the official residence of the Heads of State and senior figures visiting Spain.

Currently, the Moncloa Open programme offers weekly 90-minute guided visits around some of its facilities, upon registration on its official website. The visit includes the gardens, as well as some meeting rooms, and the buildings that house the Council of Ministers and the State Secretariat for Communication. Visits will take place on days on which there is no official agenda in the complex or when no public acts are programmed.

Services

Image

Guided tours

Practical Information

Address

Avenida
Puerta de Hierro, s/n
28071
Complejo de la Moncloa

Tourist area

Princesa

Telephone

Fax

Website

<http://www.lamoncloa.gob.es>

Email

Metro

Ciudad Universitaria (L6)

Bus

83, 133, 162

Cercanías (local train)

BiciMAD bike-share scheme

Alquiler de bicis (BiciMAD)

--

Price

Free

Times

Moncloa Open Programme See official website

Type

Sights and monuments

Official Tourism Website

 | MADRID